KYLE DALY

"Every photograph is the photographer's opinion on something. It's about what they feel about something: what they think is horrible, tragic or funny."
Mary Ellen West

Our Advanced Digital Photography students have been working on the subject of street photography, taking excursions to Lambertville and New Hope to explore this wonderful genre. Prior to leaving the studio, we discussed the concept of street photography and what ingredients make this style of photography successful. A good street photograph needs a strongly defined subject and even though it may be visually busy or complex, the conventions of composition and lighting still apply. The students worked hard to incorporate this into their findings and the results were beautiful.
I hope you enjoy looking at them.
